OPINION

Mr. Rasik Gupta
Principal, Darshan Academy

Never Compare Your Kids: Each Individual has Different Potential and Abilities

Chintu, you are good for nothing. Sharma ji's son is far better than you. He has scored first in the class with 99 %. Even Verma ji's daughter has scored 95 %, 8 % more than you. You couldn't score even 90 %. I'm feeling so ashamed that I can't face them in the office." Such remarks are very common in many of Indian Homes when the children are not able to meet the expectations of their parents especially when it comes to their performance in exams. Not only studies but in other fields as well such as , "Look at your handwriting, so bad. Monika's handwriting is far better than yours. You can't draw a simple circle whearas Monu is so good at drawing that he's favoutite of every teacher. Look at your uniform, so dirty. Arjun's uniform is always as good as new when he comes back home after school. You can't even finish one chapati on time, children of your age finish four by the time you eat one." This reminds me of a short story. A father was taking his son to school in his Maruti Alto car. Suddenly, an Audi overtook them with a lot of speed. The son was observing it. After some time, a BMW overtook them. Then a Mercedese and after that a Honda City, an Innova, a Fortuner and even a Maruti Swift overtook them one by one. Now the son couldn't contain himself and asked his father, "Papa, all the cars are overtaking us. Why don't you overtake them?" The father replied, " my dear child the model of our car is different. All those cars are better model and make. Our car can't compete with them. The capacity, potential and ability of our car is different and lower than them. So, we can't compare our car with those cars." The son looked surprised and asked his father," then why do you keep comparing me with my class mates and children of your friends? Am I not a different model and make? Do I have same capacity, potential and abilities like them?" The father was speechless. He could not answer back. But in his heart of heart, he knew that his son was right. Every human being is different having different skills, knowledge, abilities and potential. Even God has not made all five fingers alike. He felt sorry from his son and promised him that he will never comapre him with anyone else in future and will respect his individuality. Such stories teach us a very good lesson that we must treat our children as unique and different individuals meant to act and perform differently in every walk of life. Not everyone can become a doctor or engineer and same is applicable to performance in Exams. When it comes to earning livelihood, there is a long list of professions which don't require highrer percentages or for that matter even Higher studies. There are lot of International and National Examples of Successful persons who couldn't even complete their studies in schools or colleges. The great Sachin Tendulkar, Bill Gates , Mark Z u k e r b e r g , Salmaan Khan, Amir Khan, Mary Kom etc are live examples of the ones who couldn't complete their education but did a lot better in their own field and are f a m o u s a t international level. Had they been compared with other students at their times by their parents and forced to complete their education in order to get a 9 to 5 job, world would have been deprived of such immensely talented personalities. Instead of comparing and cursing our children all the time, we must try to figure out their hidden talents and their interests and promote the same with complete dedication so that they can taste the fruit of success in their desired field. The tally of successful people will be multiplied many folds in this way and world will become a lot more happier place to live with satisfied and contented individuals all around.
