EXPERIENCES OF MY RECENT
UK VISIT

British people are known as one of the prominent colonizers in the world. This country is delightfully diverse and bewilderingly beautiful, has a unique charm that enthralls almost everyone who visits or is lucky enough to call it home. What I have experienced there is, at the outset to convey to you that the British English accent is very charming and sophisticated which gives us pleasure whenever we are talking to these people. British have also contributed to the invention of numerous wonderful things which we are using in our day-to-day life and can be counted as Television, world wide web (internet) – an achievement par excellence, Jet engines, discovery of cement and antibiotics and of course for you youngsters its tin can and

The British are so polite in nature that they love the word “sorry”. They would apologize for everything even if there is nothing to apologize for. Not controlling my emotions here, I wish to convey this gesture of theirs to you, which is almost contrary to the culture we are living in India. Hence, if we wish to come closer to some achievements, we have to remain calm and whenever there is some mistake on the part of someone else and we should also have the courage to say sorry to others to their delight for some of our own mistakes, may be of minor in nature. It will definitely give pleasure to the person saying sorry for any type of mistake which will work as booster for the minds. Saying only sorry does

Artfully crafted sandwiches, cakes and spoons washed down with copious amounts of tea. The importance of tea is evident from the fact that the Brits put their keenness into it while preparing the tea by banging the kettle on, tea bag in cup, hot water in, tippie of milk, two sugars and it's done. That's how they enjoy the evening tea. Of course fabulous, No? Another interesting aspect I have observed about the Brits is their love for queues – Brits love structure when it comes to chocolate bar, Cadbury dairy milk, curly wurlies, Chocolate freddos and M & S's chocolate brownie bites, Yum. Another crazy fact about UK is their awareness to reach out to the remotest areas of the country and from what I have observed from there is that even in smallest and most remote of the places you can usually find a church, a castle, a pub or a small house that dates back to the 17th century.

not undermine the value of thanking others for even small helps or helping hands from others. To be thankful and explicitly saying it to others for any type of help is also there in DNA of the Brits which is also an ingredient of attaining much desired achievements in this world. Adding ‘please’ or ‘thank you’ to everyday interactions can make things go a lot more waiting for turn. It's endearing, really, how polite they are. Other worthy point to get on with is their calm attitude and with it they stay calm and composed, no matter what life throws at them which is a very pious quality needs to be adopted by everyone. “Keep calm and carry on” isn't just a slogan on a poster. It sums up Brits take on life. It pays to learn good habits whatever and whomsoever it comes. Having said that, the UK visit was very interesting when anybody visits there as a tourist to enjoy the London landmarks, like Big Ben, Tower Bridge, St. Paul's Cathedral, Buckingham Palace and so on. To know more about UK, we must know that there is an existence of world class universities like Oxford, Cambridge, Imperial, Kings College

Dr. Manbir Singh

Though I have graduated from the United Kingdom, & very much familiar with the social values of this amazing country, I still was awestruck in my recent visit to the UK. I was overwhelmed by the scenario there with regard to discipline, coordination, social relationship, people abiding by the road traffic rules. I feel it is worth sharing some of my experiences having witnessed and observed from UK with all of you so as to understand that all of us could gain from the British social values and culture, notwithstanding the fact that we have our own culture and many of our Indian concepts are far better than even the European countries but still, there is nothing wrong in nurturing good values from whatever the source it may be.

smoothly. The British are notoriously polite and probably repeat these words, dozens of times a day to nearly everyone they meet. The more you learn to use these words generously, the more you will get involved in culture – and who doesn't appreciate a bit of extra politeness? The city of London offers variety of excitement, innovative culture that it champions at and that's why the love of London endures.

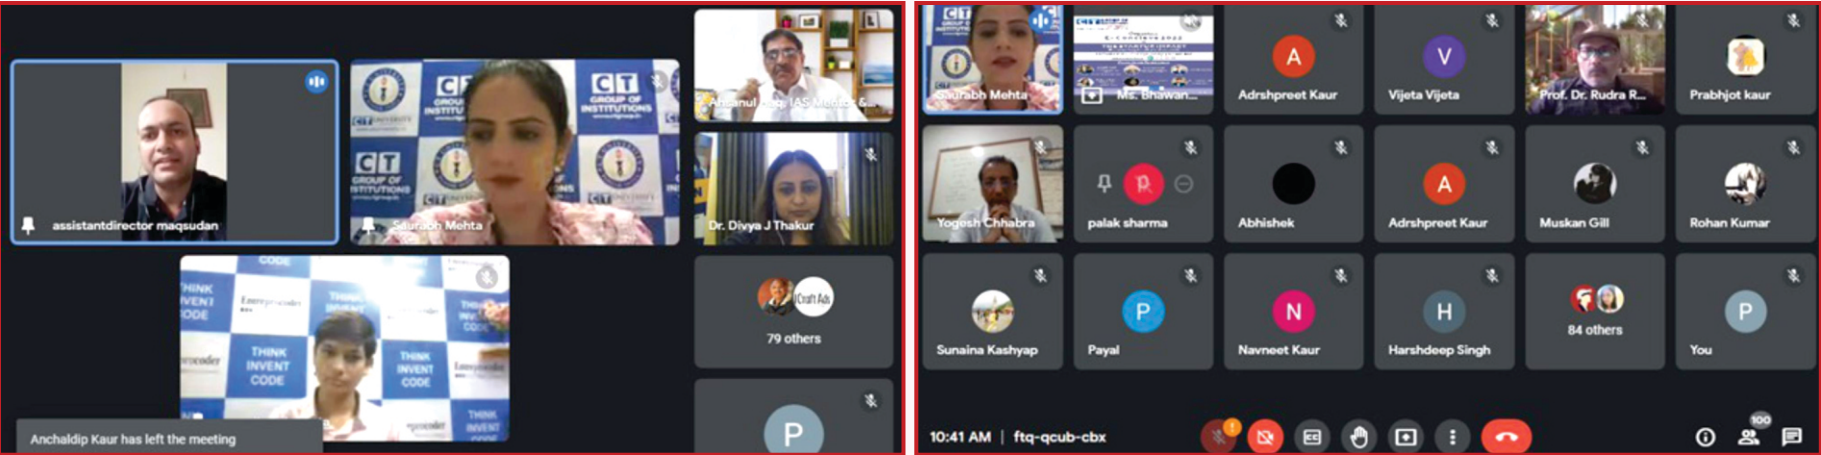

The very important facts about full English breakfast and afternoon tea - There is no better start than having a full English breakfast for which it is famous for and having a slightly fancier take on afternoon tea but no less British.

and many others like the London School of Economics et.al. The brilliant students in the world like to call UK their home. Sports like tennis, rugby, football, and cricket are Brits insanely passionate sports and not to forget the very important fact that from golden sands to pretty pebble beaches and the sea side in the UK is simply stunning. I hope you would like to appreciate my UK visit observations & its impressions and possibly learn and try to adapt the goodness of it's wonderful culture.

OPINION

Mr. Malkeet Singh

E-Business as A New Trend in the Economy

E-business can comprise a range of functions and services, ranging from the development of intranets and extranets to e-service, the provision of services and tasks over the Internet by application service providers. Today, as major corporations continuously rethink their businesses in terms of the Internet, specifically its availability, wide reach, and ever-changing capabilities, they are conducting e-business to buy parts and supplies from other companies, collaborate on sales promotions, and conduct joint research. With the security built into today's browsers, and with digital certificates now available for individuals and companies from Verisign, a certificate issuer, much of the early concern about the security of business transaction on the Web has abated, and e-business by whatever name is accelerating. With internet taking the centre stage in our lives, doing business has become much easier. Email has made communication easier, faster, and more reliable. Teleconferencing helps in delivering ideas to your employees no matter where they are. There are a lot of businesses you can do through internet and a reach a greater number of people than you ever thought was possible before. Due to its interdisciplinary nature and its pace in penetrating into various facets of everyday activities, e-business has become an increasingly popular topic over the last two decades. The modern economy is based not only on capital and human resources, but above all on information that enterprises possess. The right information at the right time may determine the development and strong competitive position of an enterprise on the market, whereas lack of such information may even lead to its failure. A properly developed e-business strategy and tools that are well suited for the specificity of this type of business and appropriately used have a positive impact on an enterprise's success. E-business comprises:

- e-commerce
- e-enterprise
- e-economy
- e-society
- e-government
- e-banking
- e-learning

Currently, the term e-business may be used in several contexts. First: e-business may constitute an element of an enterprise management strategy consisting in the use of solutions designed to increase an enterprise's competitiveness. In such a case, companies may conduct part of their activity on-line, or use technology to improve internal or external information exchange. Second: e-business is a model of an enterprise that operates mainly on the Internet, limiting to minimum its "Physical" presence on the market or traditional customer service. Broadband network is regarded as the basic infrastructure of the modern knowledge-based economy; therefore it should be at the centre of attention of all countries that want to compete on the global market.

EXPLORING OF BITCOIN LIKE A HUMAN RESOURCES DEPARTMENT

There are various HR concepts that can be taken out and utilised in the Bitcoin community. Rarely are the sociological ramifications of the technological advance that Bitcoin represents readily evident at first glance, though. The larger significance of what is happening with Bitcoin may go completely unnoticed by those who don't interact directly with the technology and other Bitcoiners. A cult and an ideology have been used to describe the Bitcoin community. I prefer to think of it in a more straightforward and realistic way: Bitcoin is a tool. There are many things that can be said about the tool and how it works, but in the end, in my opinion, it is a tool of comparison and measuring, similar to a ruler. The way we use Bitcoin as a tool depends on our individual skills. Some Bitcoiners appear to find any form of group coordination repulsive. I would like to make the following conditions for individuals who are opposed to collectivism. Coordination with a group differs from identification with a group. While the latter is an illusory extension of the ego, the former is collaborative effort. Any initiative that requires someone to put aside their own wants in order to serve a group would limit individual freedom. On the other hand, any task that combines personal interests with those of promoting Bitcoin would strengthen individual liberties. Only when used individually and not as an outgrowth of one's own identification with a conceptual group, is this thought useful. The bitcoin ethos emphasises self-reliance and not depending on other systems to take care of you. But as each of us grows strong enough to stand alone, we can also use that fortitude to support one another. We are in for a crazy trip to an exceptional human experience if Bitcoin can sustain even a small portion of the transformations that I hope it can.

RELIANCE JIO TOPPLES BSNL, BECOMES LARGEST FIXED-LINE SERVICE PROVIDER WITH OVER 7 MILLION SUBSCRIBERS

State-run telecom firms BSNL and MTNL lost 15,734 and 13,395 wireline customers, respectively, in August.
