CT NORTH CAMPUS ORGANISES SEMINAR ON GREEN DIWALI

Diwali is the festival of lights. It's a celebration that marks the victory of good over evil, light over darkness and knowledge over ignorance. Diwali is celebrated across all communities of India, creating a homogenous environment of goodwill and happiness. With the aim to provide knowledge to students about the concept of Eco-friendly and pollution free diwali, A seminar on Green Diwali was organized by CTIMIT. The key Speaker for this seminar was Shri Damanbir Singh, PPS, ACP North, District Commissionerate Jalandhar. He enlightened the students about the concept of Green Diwali. He mentioned that it is a festival to celebrate with family and friends to light up our and others' lives with lights, gifts, and sweets. Yet, bursting firecrackers has become a prominent part of the festival. Firecrackers lead to gaseous pollutants emissions that harm the environment and health. Also, the noise causes distress to the elderly, especially to those with heart disease. This seminar enriched the students with immense awareness and zeal to celebrate eco-friendly this year and in the coming years. Shri Damanbir Singh, PPS, ACP North Interacted with the students on how the crackers and the noises can badly impact the health of the pets. "These Seminars play a vital role in expanding knowledge and stay current with concepts prevailing and new moderations." says the campus director Dr. Yogesh Chhabra. Dr. Ramandeep Gautam (HoD, Assistant Director, Management Department, CTIMIT, Maqsudan Campus) quotes "Besides the obvious academic benefits of expanding students knowledge and exploring new skills at an early age, such seminars redefine the education system in significant ways."

The Symbolic Rise of Regional Films Catches More Eyeballs Than Bwood

Bhaskar Basava
Research Scholar

The emergence of regional films shows the power of quality and content over casting and adventures. Though many credit 'Bahubali' as a starting era of regional films taking over Bwood. But it all started with films like Mass (2004) Telugu, Shivaji (2007) Tamil, and Premam (2015) Malayalam. These films had turned the young population to look towards regional films which resulted in creating a fraction and no introduction for credibility. But in the same 2000s, the regional films were not able to hit Btown as they lacked budget and theatre space. But due to the emerging tech world and OTT, the constraints have been overcome and that's how the current regional films are overtaking Bwood. Also, the diaspora of regional people all over the north are been good message carriers and promoters among the Btown audience, if believed to be a content hit. Now regional cinema with small budgets contributes nearly half of the box office collection. As per the PVR's Gross box office collection, the share of Bwood has declined to 38 percent in the current quarter and regional films thrive at 44 percent. The recent grand success of Kantara is taking over Bwood films of Doctor G and Ramsetu. It has been noted that the regional films are planning to end remakes and are willing to grow quality dubbing culture in its place. Even director Rishab Shetty in his recent interview asserted that "Kantara should not be remade in Hindi". They are many popular films that are remade in Bwood and hit the box office with thunder such as Wanted, Singam, Ghajini, and Hera Pheri. The Bwood should now concentrate on content over casting, if wanted to bring glory and establish healthy competition with regional films.

UNLOCKING POTENTIALS WITH HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL ONLINE

I majored in English Literature and all my life I had plans to delve deeper into scopes of literature. Never did I think I would change my foresight and strive to learn anything but literature. One fine day, a notification pops on my laptop, that was an Email from CT Group, declaring that faculty here can be a part of Harvard Business School. In my heart, I said, "yes, yes, yes". I was thinking that I might learn with learners panning across 160 countries and that was it. I said a yes! I took up "Leadership Principles", as clearly wherever we go, whichever field we are in and whatever journey we undertake, leadership is a prerequisite. The course started and I was essentially impressed by the content and delivery of ideas, theories and facts. Our professors, Joshua Margolis and Anthony Mayo, both pioneers of leadership initiatives at The
